Speaker’s Biography

Scott Grosse, PhD is a Research Economist and Associate Director for Health Services Research and Evaluation in the Division of Blood Disorders at the National Center on Birth Defects and Developmental Disabilities at the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. He is working on issues facing people with blood disorders with a special focus on the prevention and economics of deep vein thrombosis and pulmonary embolism.